About Me

My name is Aidana Amirtay, I am an IT student and a future web developer. From the early years of my studies, I became fascinated with web development because it combines two things I truly enjoy: the logic of programming and the creativity of design.

I have experience working with HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, building responsive websites, and using modern tools for development and visualization. What inspires me the most is turning ideas into functional and user-friendly websites that make life easier for people and businesses.

I believe that websites are more than just code — they are a way to communicate with people. That's why I focus not only on technical quality but also on aesthetics: minimalism, usability, and harmony are the main principles I follow in my projects.

Currently, I am continuing to learn, grow, and develop my skills to become a professional capable of creating projects from concept to completion.

Skills

HTML, CSS, JavaScript, Git, MySQL, Laravel, PHP

Work Experience

I completed a two-month internship at Relog, a Kazakhstani company specializing in digitalization and IT solutions. There I worked as a Project Manager, where I was responsible for task management, deadline tracking, team coordination, and reporting during sprints. I also provided technical support when needed.

During this internship, I gained valuable skills such as teamwork, communication with new people, and preparing presentations and reports.

At the end of my internship, I received an offer to continue working as a Web Developer, but I decided to postpone it until I finish my studies in college.
